

Black Field Cricket

Teleogryllus commodus

A common species found in warm areas around New Zealand. The male cricket makes that familiar shrill call - the purpose being to attract a mate and to help guard it`s territory.
Up to 25mm long.

Almost all CRICKETS have wings but most do not FLY
THEY rub their wings together to create their SONG