

GREEN tree FROG

Litoria aurea

These frogs get to 80mm in size but the ones here are just youngsters. They are hard to see because of their size and colouration. Look closely and you will see them.

They eat insects and other small animals and often move well away from water. They use ponds and ditches to breed and the tadpoles eat plant and animal food as they grow up.

The smallest frog in the world the Golden Frog is 9.8mm long. This big
