

REEVES TURTLE

Chinemys reevesii

Originating from China and Japan, the Reeves Turtle is a good swimmer and is commonly found in canals, streams and ponds.

This turtle has yellow or greenish spots and blotches on its head and neck. The male has a longer tail and is smaller than the female.

The Reeves Turtle feeds on insects and other invertebrates - along with frogs, fish and aquatic plants.

The female lays 2 to 3 white, near round eggs in the soil which take between 3 and 4 months to hatch.
